

Extend Time On Income Payments

Gates Orders No Penalty Added Until September 1

Failure To Secure Supplies and Equipment
Given As Cause.

SWAMP OFFICE FORCE

Literally Covered With Mail Payments During Last Two Days.

LITTLE ROCK, Aug. 14.—(AP)—David A. Gates, State Commissioner of Revenues, today ordered an extension of 15 days or until September 1, for the payment of income taxes under the Hall law of 1928.

In announcing the extension, Mr. Gates said the penalty would not be added if returns are filed and payment made within the extended time limit.

Thursday, August 15, was originally designated as the final date of payment, but the department being literally swamped under thousands of remittances within the past three weeks, Mr. Gates said the extension was determined upon because of unavoidable delay in securing forms and equipment and because of the further reason that attacks upon the constitutionality of the act necessitated a Supreme Court ruling, pending which nothing could be done.

Mr. Gates said he believed the additional two weeks would be a sufficient length of time in which tax payers might comply with the provisions of the act. Yesterday, he said, thousands of remittances were received from all over the state making it by far the largest day since the collection work started.

The revenue department was besieged today with hundreds of persons milling about, seeking to find some to accept their reports and payments, believing this to be the last day in which the business could be transacted.

EL DORADO, August 14.—(AP)—A second disease threatened the life of Bobby Jane Holmes, four, daughter of R. J. Holmes, prominent local oil man, the baby for 19 days having been making a fight for life against a strange disease which causes her to bleed through the pores of her skin.

The child has contracted a throat infection, according to physicians, and this further complicates the fight of the first disease which the doctors describe as "purpura hemorrhagica."

Many physicians have been called into consultation in the case and today hundreds of offers of aid, by mail, telegraph and telephone, have reached the family.

British Nobleman In Street Fight

Chases Man Down Street
While Woman Chases
Him.

LONDON, Aug. 14.—(AP)—A street fight in which Lord Brougham took an active hand, was described in Bu street police court this morning. The affair took place in front of a night club in the West End of the theatrical district at two o'clock this morning.

Young Howard admitted the fight and told of knocking down several men after a woman had caught him just outside the door of the club in an effort to prevent his departure.

Howard's fellow defendant was Ernest Miller, a laborer. They were charged with insulting behavior, tending to a breach of the peace and both were bound over to keep the peace for a year.

One of the members of the party described the scene in which he told of young Howard chasing a man down the street while he in turn was being chased by a woman.

SANFORD, N. C., Aug. 14.—(AP)—Three men, two of them alleged bandits, were killed and a woman seriously injured in a pistol battle at a filling station on the outskirts of this city early today.

The dead are Ola Birdson and his brother Lee, said to be from some town in Kentucky, and Gaither Edwards, operator of the filling station. Mrs. Edwards is in a hospital here seriously wounded.

The Birdsons, accompanied by Mrs. Montgomery, drove up to the station early today, according to the story told by Mrs. Edwards. As the Edwards opened the door the men demanded money. Edwards secured a pistol and began firing, the bandits returning the fire. When the shooting was over both the bandits were dead and Edwards fatally wounded. Mrs. Edwards, who went to the aid of her husband, was shot in the leg and shoulder.

U. S. Offers Aid To Peach Growers

Will Assist Orchardists
In Ridding Growth of Worm Pest.

NASHVILLE, August 14.—Congressman Otis Wingo has arranged with the United States Department of Agriculture, to furnish the peach growers of his district detailed instructions for the control and elimination of the curculio pest, which caused so much damage by voraciousness of peaches this season.

These instructions, if carried out during the fall and spring months, it is felt will practically control, if not eliminate, the pest.

Many of the orchardists of this district have already started the work of insuring against a heavy crop of curculio next year by destroying their cull peaches, which have heretofore furnished a breeding place for the pest. Several of the orchardists lost heavily this year because of the worms, while nearly all of the orchards were only slightly infested. It is hoped destruction of the culls would control the pest.

Float Prize Goes To Hospital Fund

First Prize Winners In Big Festival Parade Given To Hospital.

In the big parade of Festival day here, the float representing the three banks in this city was awarded first prize and drew for its sponsors the sum of $100 offered by the Festival committee as the prize-winning float.

Tuesday the Links took up the question of disposition of the prize money. They hadn't entered the parade with any hope of being betted financially but only to show they were possessed of civic pride and interested in the success of the event. They didn't want the money for themselves and some disposition had to be made of it. So they figured.

and the solution of the problem was easy. Some one thought of the Hope and Hempstead County Hospital Association and its laudable ambition to erect a new hospital in this city. Enough, by unanimous vote of the city's three financial institutions the prize money they had won was presented to the Association, a demonstration of the true Hope spirit toward worthy enterprise.

Courtroom.

CENTERVILLE, Tenn., August 14.—(AP)—Robert Brown and Conner Bates, aiding the state in the prosecution of Curly Wright, negro, charged with assaulting a white woman, quit the case shortly after noon today after announcing that they believed the negro innocent. Ned Eggleston, county attorney general and chief counsel for the state immediately recalled the white woman the negro was charged with assaulting.

The announcement threw the courtroom into a turmoil and it took the 100 National Guardsmen, sent here to protect the negro from possible mob violence, several minutes to restore order.

Brown and Bates resigned following a three-hours' conference with the attorney general, defense attorneys and state's witnesses. No specific explanation was made other than they were convinced of the negro's innocence and had no wish to prosecute him.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 14.—(AP)—The body of a 12-year-old girl, believed by police to have been attacked and slain by a moron, was identified today by Mr. and Mrs. Andrew K. Aune as that of their daughter, Dorothy.

The body, wrapped in a gunny sack, was found in a south side street today, twelve hours after she was reported as missing from her home. The manner in which she met death has not been determined, but Captain Omer Johnson of the Minneapolis police department, said he believed she had been attacked and murdered by a moron, strangulation being the probable cause of her death.

Police immediately began a search for a middle-aged man who had been accosting girls in the vicinity of the Aune home for several days.

Elks Jubilee Balloon Making Wild Journey

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—The Elks jubilee at Mamaroneck is being advertised rather more extensively than its sponsors anticipated, among the means employed to inform the public of the event was a 30-foot captive balloon which the Elks acquired some years ago. On the balloon big letters spelled "Elks Jubilee" and it was moored to a chimney. Today the balloon tore loose from the chimney and went soaring away. The Elks request it be returned if found and promise not to moor it to a chimney again.

Poultry Raising Given Attention

Practical Side of Industry
Stressed At Annual Fair.

Special attention is being given to the practical side of poultry raising in this year's program of the Southwest Arkansas Fair, Hope, September 23 to 28 in an effort to encourage small breeders in exhibiting at the fair.

"It is not difficult to get a chicken ready for our poultry show," said Superintendent A. H. Wade. "If they are in good physical trim, little extra care the last few days will put any good bird in shape for the show."

The prize-list for poultry is a large one, and covers all the breeds of poultry commonly raised here. The average poultry-raiser, as well as the fancier, will find much of interest to him in it. In addition to chickens, premiums are offered for turkeys and waterfowl.

Poultry exhibitors interested in showing at the fair may obtain full particulars about the show by writing to Secretary W. Homer Pigg of the fair for a premium list.

Boys Appreciative of Many Kind Things Said

Winston Cobb and Nolan Lewallen, the two Hempstead county youths who won state honors in dairy judging contests at Fayetteville last week, are duly appreciative of the many kind things said to them about their work.

In a note to Star this morning they say: "We wish to express our thanks and appreciation for the many nice things said to us over our victory at Fayetteville during Farmers Week. None are prouder than we two at bringing this honor to Hempstead county." The boys enter the contests at Memphis this fall and their tutor, County Agent Lynn Smith, is confident that they will be in the running there.

The emblem of the state championship is a particularly gorgeous affair, the center piece a four-leaf clover bearing the four H's emblematic of the club the boys represented. It is hoped that after the Mid-South dairy contest at Memphis this fall the youngsters will hang a national banner along the side of the two or three already won.

DEMANDS FAIR DEAL

Local Post Will Not Tolerate Commercializing of Annual Event.

Leslie Huddleston Post No. 12, local unit of the American Legion, met last night to check up on Melon Festival activities, the event having been sponsored this year by the Post under appointment of the Chamber of Commerce.

Routine matters were gone over, partial financial reports read and instructions given that all reports should be completed and turned in by August 20 for a final check-up, and the meeting turned its attention to other matters. Chief among these were the continuing of the weekly boxing events, agreed upon, and the question of how best to deal with those certain few individuals alleged to have "profiteered" on Festival Day by raising the price of meals, ordinarily 40 or 50 cents, to 75 cents and one dollar. The following resolution was proposed and unanimously adopted, copies being submitted to the Chamber of Commerce and the City Council for their approval and endorsement:

"WHEREAS, Leslie Huddleston Post No. 12, American Legion, was called upon to render this year a civic duty in sponsoring the fourth Melon Festival in Hope, and

"WHEREAS, said Festival, through efforts of members of this Post coupled with those of individuals not ex-service men but to whom a civic duty is a sacred duty, such Festival attained unto success; and

"WHEREAS, it has come to our knowledge that a certain few in Hope converted Festival Day into a day of money-making for themselves, shamelessly and outrageously profiteering at the expense of those to whom the Legion had extended invitations to be present on that occasion; now, therefore,

"BE IT RESOLVED, that this post unhesitatingly condemns any such practice as purely mercenary, not for the welfare of the community and a spirit evidenced only by those who contributed not one cent to the success of the Festival but who sought, like vultures of business, to fatten on the efforts of those who possess a measure of civic pride; and be it further

"RESOLVED, that we extend to all visitors to Hope on August 8 our sincere regrets that they were made victims of mercenary profiteers and assure them that the action of such profiteers does not express the sentiment of the better class of citizens of this community. And it is ordered by this Post that this resolution be spread upon the minutes of this Post and that a copy be furnished local newspapers for publication and a copy to the Hope Chamber of Commerce under whose appointment this Post sponsored said festival.

"Adopted in open meeting this, Tuesday night, August 13, 1929, at Hope, Arkansas."

Plans for active participation by the Legion in civic matters were discussed and a committee to draft suitable resolutions of appreciation for the services of those who helped make the event a success was appointed.

The Post will meet again shortly after the 20th for a final check-up of Festival finances, the expectation being that a small deficit will confront the organization and arrangements made to wipe it out.

Relative to continuation of the weekly boxing cards it was unanimously agreed that Leo Robins continue the events, with the active assistance of the Post, at least until such time as he has recouped his losses in the fights of Festival night.

The 1930 State Campaign

IT IS too early for the newspapers to give as much space as public figures are giving tongue to the issues of the 1930 Arkansas campaign, but we want to further explain and qualify what we said in this column yesterday about the state income tax.

As we stated yesterday, the income tax is not in itself a primary issue. A new tax never is. The real issue is where and for what purpose the additional revenue is required.

It is likely, therefore, that the 1930 state campaign will see the income tax completely submerged as an issue, while in its place will rise a sweeping challenge to Arkansas' efficiency in government and public education.

The additional burden of an income tax will not have been in vain if it really brings this issue to a head.

Governor Parnell makes the 1930 campaign very simple when he says that all opponents of the income tax are "tax dodgers." But we imagine it will get more complicated as the campaign draws near. There are some interesting paradoxes that will presently appear—the paradox of a man who opposes the Hall income tax; but who believes in efficient popular education; and the paradox of a man who supports the tax law without caring a whoop whether its revenues are spent for education or the glorifying of some small town.

Already we have been warned that the Hall law will not do what was at first expected—finance the schools and public works and greatly reduce the property tax. The former will be such a drain on the new revenues that the administration is doubtful whether the property tax will be reduced at all.

And yet that alone is no indictment of Mr. Parnell. The mere figures of state revenues and expenditures have no significance, except as we discover the underlying structure of state government which makes these demands upon the taxpayer's pocketbook.

Two facts have been outstanding in Arkansas history for many years—the state has never received adequate tax revenues, and the state's educational system is so loosely organized and far-flung that it is doubtful whether enough money can ever be raised to support such an extended public work.

Our quarrel with the present administration is not that it has approved a state income tax, but that it has apparently approved, and means to use income tax revenues to further extend and support, a state educational system that comprises a State University, a State College of Agriculture, four Agricultural and Mechanical High Schools, a Junior Agricultural and Mechanical High School, and two State Normal Schools.

New York or Pennsylvania might well pause before such a monumental task. And if the administration means to continue to ask for additional tax revenues while perpetuating such a monstrosity of mis-government it will be soundly defeated.

That's the 1930 state campaign in a nut-shell. And when you hear the cries and counter-cries of "income tax" and "tax-dodgers," just reflect that there is a pretty good smoke screen being sent up from both sides.

School Progress

A NEW "deskless" schoolroom has been tried successfully in some classes in Cleveland, O., schools and is being forced for all children from kindergarten through the sixth grade.

The new schoolroom takes on the appearance of a conference room and pupils do their arithmetic and geography and other lessons in groups of four or five, discussing their problems as business and professional men and women do theirs.

This plan looks promising. There is no real reason why boys and girls should not be trained in a method which they will later follow in the business world.

Little Johnny should be trained to consider his associate pupils' views.

Students have been treated as though they were something set apart from ordinary human beings. After all, education is intended to equip them to cope with the problems they will meet in dealings with other men and women, and this training should begin early.

One of the chief objects of education is to teach children to think actively and what could possibly stimulate thought more than discussion of problems with other children under the expert guidance of a capable teacher?

How He Gets That Weigh!

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington. — As soon as President Hoover had demanded some substantial reductions in military expenditures there were suggestions of eliminating obsolete or duplicating branches of the Army, and quite a few persons thought: "Well, let's get rid of the cavalry."

That idea does not set so well with the high officers of the War Department, who contend, with the concurrence of Secretary of War Good, that the cavalry is still indispensable and has not been made obsolete by airplanes, tanks and motorized transport.

One reason the Army does not want to give up its cavalry is that so many officers like to ride horseback and play polo. Secretary Good himself has a great fondness for the four-footed critters, dating back to his boyhood days on a farm in Iowa.

Plenty of Reasons

But the Army offers enough other reasons for retention and strengthening of the cavalry, with officers of the cavalry themselves displaying the greatest mental agility in expounding and demonstrating them. Good has cited expert testimony to the effect that the World War would soon have been over if either France or Germany had possessed a sufficiently strong and mobile force of cavalry.

"Other arms may win battles; only cavalry will make them worth winning," said Lord Haig, and the argument of our own military men is that it would be dangerous to form fixed ideas of war from the World War's long period of trench warfare. No nation will voluntarily submit to a war of attrition behind barbed wire, and for wars of maneuver an army must have horse foot and artillery, along with such modern improvements as planes and tanks.

Instead of dropping out of the picture to give way to armored cars and swift tanks, the cavalry expects to add these to its own units and thereby extend its radius of action and its fire power.

Whereas, the air service is restricted by weather conditions in scouting work and reconnaissance, cavalry can be used at night and in all kinds of weather and also in thickly wooded territory, where enemy units might be hidden from aerial observation. Cavalry is also able to pick up important detail, by minute searches and by questioning inhabitants, for instance. It may be able to operate when enemy aircraft frustrates ours.

Armored cars are considered more vulnerable than cavalry and they can be easily blocked. Tanks are unable to operate alone or to hold captured ground. They are liable to mechanical difficulties and are likely to be impeded by water, thick woods and boulders. Cavalry is never hampered by lack of gasoline.

"The capacity of an army formation is not shown until it gets off the roads," says a cavalry officer. "Weather conditions and lack of roads mean little to cavalry—it can carry on just the same."

In ordinary warfare, when a maneuver isn't rendered impossible by trench fighting with flanks resting on impassable obstacles, cavalry does its stuff by arriving quickly at the scene of action, spreading out over wide spaces if necessary, concentrating quickly, attacking suddenly by surprise and escaping quickly after striking

A $5 Fight for Four-Bits Is New Wrinkle In Boxing Promoters Life

Leo Robins Tries New Stunt In Making Flat Charge of 50 Cents for 30 Rounds of Boxing At the Open-Air Arena in Fair Park.

There's always something new happening, the old saw that "There's nothing new under the sun" to the contrary notwithstanding. This time it is Leo Robins, match-maker and promoter of local boxing events under auspices of the American Legion, who blossoms out with a brand-new idea.

It's simple, too. Just a straight charge of 50 cents for admission to the park, no reserve seats nor any extra charge, and a five-dollar fight for the four-bit piece. That's the new wrinkle which has fight fans wondering what it is all about.

For Thursday night's mix-up he is using Jack Steele, Smackover, against Jimmie Tillman, of Atlanta, Texas, who is said to be mightily good for a country boy and who will perhaps, demonstrate to Mr. Steele that not all the marble in the country is in the cemeteries.

One of the best known and most highly respected women of the Fulton community, who died Monday afternoon, was shipped today to Monroe, La., her old home, for interment.

Mrs. Arnett's death came suddenly and her relatives throughout this section are receiving condolence of friends in the death of this good woman.

to be a favorite here, swapping wallops with an ambitious youngster from up to Gurdon. The open air arena at the park is cool, well-lighted and capable of seating a real crowd. Bouts will be held there until the ad-some distance off, if you judge by the thermometer today. And fans will watch with a good deal of interest Robins' plan to give fans 30 rounds of fighting for 50 cents where they paid five dollars for seven rounds in Little Rock Monday night.

"DEVELOPING NATURAL RESOURCES"

The Story of NATURAL GAS

No. 2

This is the second of a series of stories of the forces behind your natural gas.

GATHERING SUPPLIES

In our last picture in this paper, we saw the geologists and lease buyers securing the land for the opening of a new gas field. Often, new roads must be built for the transportation of equipment to the place where drilling will be started. Tractors and teams are required to penetrate the wilderness to bring machinery and timber.

Soon, however, all necessary gear is on hand and the erection of the derrick and engine house is begun. You little think as you light the burner on one of the many gas appliances in your home of the teamster blazing the trail to the gas field. His work is only a small link in the chain of human and mechanical aid that brings gas to you.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Molly Burnham, who has returned from Italy to care for little Rita Newton, the child of her dead roommate, receives a call from a young woman named Elsie Smith, who seems to be something of a blackmailer.

Elsie is determined to marry Bob Newton, Rita's father, although he has been widowed less than a month. She asks Molly to use her influence with Bob, and does a little threatening. Molly, disgusted, protests that the affair is none of her business.

Meantime, her second play—"Sacrifice"—Opens in New York. And, in the front row, sits Jack Wells, Molly's sweetheart, with a middle-aged woman!

Now Go On With the Story

CHAPTER XXXI

Of course it spoiled the evening for her—Jack's being with a woman. And sitting, as they were, in the front row where Molly could hardly keep her eyes off them, all evening. Such a woman, too!

"If she were young and pretty, I would mind half so much!" fumed Molly.

But that, of course, was wrong. She would have minded a great deal more.

"The wretched creature!" she fretted. "Done up like a circus rider, and fat enough to burst! A woman like that would wear red—it's exactly the color of her face."

There was no doubt about it. It was Mrs. Bulwer-Eaton all right. "A charming matron," the papers called her! Well, Molly knew what she'd call her—only the papers wouldn't print it. The big fat ox! Hadn't she sense enough to know that coquetry in a woman of her age was simply disgusting? The way she was hanging on to Jack's arm! And Jack—red as a beet. Molly was glad he had the decency to be embarrassed.

At last it was over. The curtain came down on the last act. And the lights went up over the theatre. Mrs. Bulwer-Eaton was clapping her puffy hands. And her diamonds were gleaming like mad.

FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS

Maybe I'm foolish. But I do care what people say. I can't help it. I suppose it's weakness. After "Delphine," when they all said such lovely things, I was thrilled to death. Then Mother started finding fault. And it spoiled the fine edge. The beautiful glamour was gone. It wasn't because she was my mother. It wasn't because she represented a certain provincial group who were going to think "Delphine" was coarse and crude, and not fit for nice people. That hurt me. Because I don't want to write things that anyone will think are vulgar.

"I'd lots rather that people would think I was just a nice, every-day sort of person, with a nice, ordinary every-day mind. I don't want to be intellectual, or hard-boiled, or anything of the sort."

The Durbins laughed, humoring their guest.

"You sound as though you were giving an interview for a religious weekly," declared Mr. Durbin.

"You can laugh all you want!" she flared. "But it's true—I'm nothing but a country girl. I'm Snodgrass, born and bred. My mother's a pillar of a small town society. My father's the salt of the earth. And no daughter of theirs could ever glory in a lot of cheap publicity. It simply goes against the grain. I'm provincial. And proud of it!"

"Hear! Hear!" applauded Mrs. Durbin. "Give this little girl a hand."

"I'm not putting on an act!" protested Molly. "I'm telling you the truth."

Durbin grinned happily.

"It's good stuff anyhow," he approved. "Give it to the reporters. They'll eat it up."

Molly looked frightened.

"That's right. There'll be more reporters around. Oh, Lord!"

"I've an idea!" proclaimed Mr. Durbin jubilantly. "We'll give a benefit matinee, and we'll turn the theatre over to the clubwomen. That will mean we'll have their endorsement. And the censors won't have a leg to stand on, if the mothers of young girls approve our show."

"Then we'll have an invitation performance for clergymen. You can give them a little spiel from the stage, Molly."

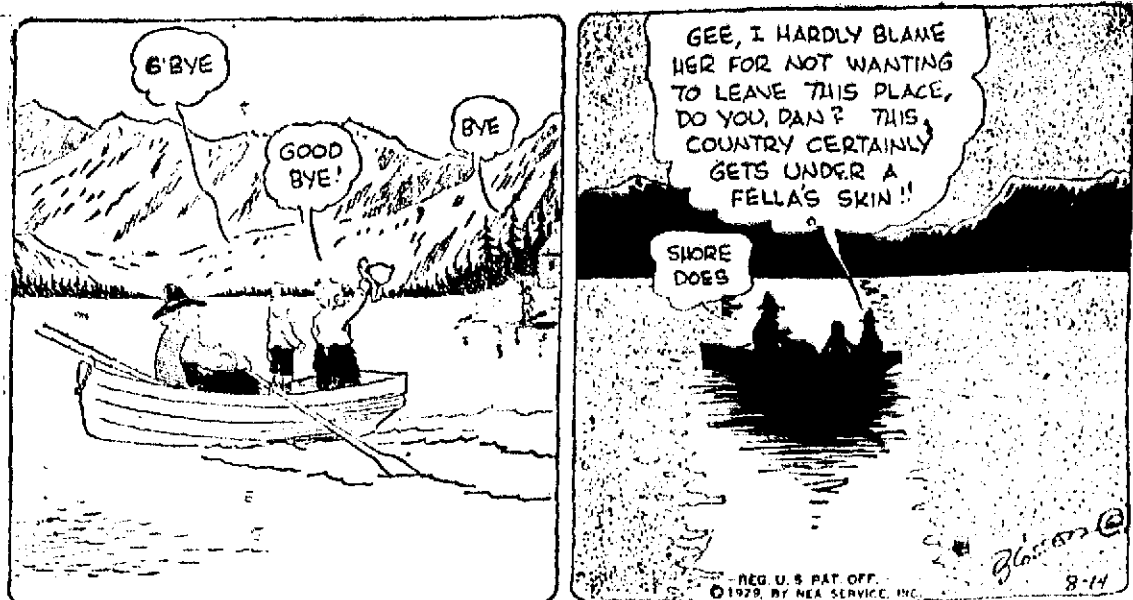

"Count me out," instructed Molly. "I've had all I can stand now."

"Well, leave it to me," compromised Durbin. "I've a clever little press agent, and I'll let her manage it all."

"Maybe the papers will start an argument pro and con. Solicit the opinion of clubwomen. Educators. Reformers. It doesn't make any difference whether they pen us or not. We get the advertising anyhow, and it's publicity that money can't buy."

The little producer smiled happily.

A Great Country!

Emil Jannings in "Sins of the Fathers," A Paramount Picture

Emil Jannings, the great character actor of the screen, comes to the Saenger theatre in "Sins of the Fathers," presented with Paramount Quality Sound, on tomorrow.

"Sins of the Fathers" marks Jannings' fifth American made picture, with the added features provided by synchronization, is said to eclipse his past performances in view of the fact that the musical score and sound effects give the performance added dramatic power.

Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, for years recognized as the leader of all motion picture composers, has given the picture musical treatment.

The Paramount orchestra of seventy-five pieces was used to record the music arranged by the famed director, and Irvin Talbot conducted.

A CORRECTION

In an article in Star of Tuesday there appeared the statement that E. S. Greening was president of the new consolidated school district in which that magnificent new school house is being constructed at Spring Hill.

Wrong. Our informant had his wires crossed and we were not smart enough to catch the mistake. Mr. Greening is one of Hope's good citizens and does not live in the district where the school building is being erected. O. O. Brent, of Spring Hill, one of Hempstead county's many good citizens keenly alive to the educational needs of the youth of the rural sections, is president of the consolidated district board. Sorry, Mr. Brent, for the mistake. The error was ours.

Wayne England returned to his position at Brooks Drug store at DeQueen having spent his vacation with home folks here.
